USAID Stories - Fishing for Fortune: Ruma leads the way <https://stories.usaid.gov/fishing-for-fortune/#page-1>
 Since 2011, Feed the Future, the U.S. Government's global hunger and food security initiative, has helped more than 80,000 Bangladeshi farmers increase their profits by raising fish. The USAID Aquaculture for Income and Nutrition (AIN) project is implemented by the WorldFish Center under the Feed the Future initiative, which is concentrated in 20 districts of southern Bangladesh. The activity disseminates improved quality lines of fish and shrimp seed, creates employment opportunities, and increases overall production across commercial aquaculture in Bangladesh. As a result, production has increased by 25 percent since the project started in 2011. In addition to the financial benefits, raising fish also helps poor farmers provide a rich source of protein to improve the nutrition of their families and their communities. Farmers also learn to grow vegetables on the embankments surrounding their ponds, which has helped improve family nutrition and generate additional income. More than half of the fish farmers that were trained are women like Ruma.
